[JOHN ALLERTON / JOHN LAKEMAN] Male, early-mid 30s, handsome in an unassuming way . John is a US spy with the best intentions in spite of things often going awry. Coming from a family of politicians, John honors his duty by engaging on missions regardless of the strain it causes on his marriage. Despite his job, he is a sensitive soul he has found folk music as an outlet to his work. *PLEASE NOTE IF TALENT CAN SING. SERIES REGULAR

[EDWARD ALLERTON] Male, mid-late 30s, John's older brother. Edward is a United States Congressman, probably a legacy of his father's towering achievement as a public servant. He is something of a crap magnet, and he regularly puts his foot in his mouth during public statements. Well aware of his brother's every move as a master spy, Edward is always willing to go to bat for his brother. SERIES REGULAR

[TOM ALLERTON] Male, 60s, a handsome man with the bearing of an elder statesman. He is the Director of Intelligence for the State Department and John and Edward's father. Tom lives in a rarefied world of achievement and accomplishment, and although his sons baffle him, he loves them a great deal. Tom regularly orders his younger son into the field on some vital mission or another and tries to make sense of the duality of this man: the spy and the folk singer...SERIES REGULAR

[ALICE ALLERTON] Female, early-mid 30s, attractive, but not impossibly so. Alice is John's wife and an elementary school teacher whose basic decency can be read from a distance. The greatest hardship of her life is the fact that her husband goes away for long indeterminate stretches of time, and there's never a guarantee that she will see him again. SERIES REGULAR STORY LINE: Not-quite-master spy JOHN ALLERTON is the son of TOM ALLERTON, a Director of Intelligence with the State Department. John's career as a spy working under Non Official Cover (NOC) is plagued by one little detail: he's got a government job, and in the real world, everyone in the Federal Government screws up. John has one ally when he goes into the field to stop Iran from getting a short-range nuclear weapon: his older brother CONGRESSMAN EDWARD ALLERTON, who always has his back...
